The bride is the daughter of Richard and Diane DeBerry. The groom is the son of Jeff and Kim McDonnell.

The father of the bride gave Brooke to be married in the double-ring ceremony officiated by Jeff Hodgson and Walt Alexander, pastors of the church.

Brooke wore a white, lace-trimmed, floor-length dress with a cathedral-length veil and carried a bouquet of hydrangeas.

The groom wore a brown and tan suit with a natural leaf boutonniere designed by the bride.

Best friends of the bride, Melanie Peggs and Susie Johnson, were maid of honor and first bridesmaid. Matthew Glass served as best man. Bridesmaids wore tea-length blue satin dresses, and grooms-men wore tan suits with brown pants.

Anna Kate Stanley and brothers, Hunter and Juddson, were flower girl and ring bearers.

A selection of hymns and music and a time of worship highlighted the wedding ceremony set in a garden party theme. After exchanging vows, the bride and groom served each other from a white wedding cake topped with love birds and enjoyed an ice cream with all the toppings and cappuccino bar reception with their guests. After sharing a special dance together, Brooke danced with her father to "Daddy, Dance With Me," and Jordan danced with his mother to "You'll Be in My Heart."

Balloons were released as Brooke and Jordan left the church. After a honeymoon in Savannah, Ga., the couple resides in Knoxville.
