Tennessee Small Business Relief Program expands

Vivian Jones

Tennessee's Small Business Relief Program will expand to include more industries after a new allocation of $83.5 million for the program, Gov. Bill Lee and the Financial Stimulus Accountability Group announced Friday.

Additional relief will go to small businesses adversely effected or required to close because public health orders regarding the COVID-19 pandemic. The new funding comes in addition to the program's $200 million initial allotment, funded with federal COVID-19 relief dollars.

"We've heard from many who were not on the original list of eligible businesses - like event and wedding planners, caterers, photographers, travel agents, tour bus operators, and others - and this relief will help them greatly," Jim Brown, Tennessee state director for the National Federation of Independent Business, said in a statement. "These grants will help many bridge the gap to better times and, frankly, help many stay in business. Many more will need more federal and state support to survive the ongoing economic downturn."

Businesses will be eligible for the program if they have less than $10 million in annual gross sales and are in an industry affected by executive orders in response to the pandemic. Relief payments will range from $2,500 to $30,000, depending on the business' gross sales.

New categories of businesses eligible for the program include: caterers, wedding and event planners, convention and trade show organizers, photography studios, travel agencies, taxi, limousine and bus services, fine arts instruction schools, music production and sound recording studios, and others.

Businesses can check their eligibility on the Tennessee Department of Revenue website. Eligible businesses will be contacted by the department, and are required to certify their eligibility with the department in order to receive funds.

"The COVID-19 pandemic has placed enormous strain on businesses and industries of all types," Lee said. "We'll continue to distribute federal resources prudently to address the pressing needs of Tennessee businesses to get our economy back on track."

Vanderbilt analysis: Masks appear to slow Tennessee hospitalizations

NASHVILLE (AP) - A Vanderbilt University analysis of daily COVID-19 hospitalization data in Tennessee shows a stark difference between counties with mask mandates and counties that do not require face coverings.

The Vanderbilt Department of Health Policy analyzed statewide hospital admissions and found that those in areas requiring most residents to wear masks recorded a 30% increase in new admissions in July, The Tennessean reported this month. Hospitals in areas where most residents are not required to wear face coverings saw a 200% jump in the same time period, researchers said.

Large urban hospitals that treat a mix of patients were somewhere in the middle.

The Vanderbilt analysis did not fully attribute the decline in hospitalizations to mask mandates. Some places that require masks also have other public health orders that likely had an effect.

The Vanderbilt research did not distinguish the impact of one of these public health orders from the other, said Vanderbilt Associate Professor John Graves, a researcher on the project.

"We can't say for sure that masking is the reason this is happening because there are often other interventions in places like Nashville and Memphis where bars and restaurants are limited," Graves said in a statement. "But we do see a clear relationship between areas where masks are required and hospitalizations for the coronavirus."

Masks remain a source of debate in Tennessee. Gov. Bill Lee has encouraged Tennesseans to wear masks, but has rejected pleas for a statewide mandate. He empowered county mayors to make calls on whether to issue such orders.

Well August has quickly passed by, can't believe summer is almost gone. Most of us have stayed home all this time. I think every week things will get better but it hasn't yet. Maybe some day soon. There's not much to write about.

Neal Jeter from Clifton visited last week with Pat and Alice Whitlow. Also Jimmy Victory visited with them.

Janice Webb spent the weekend in Knoxville with her daughter Nichole and husband Chris Coleman and children. She had a great time. It's always good to spend time with your children.

Congratulations to Kelsey Bizzell, winner of a $10,000 Cooperative Youth Ambassador Scholarship from the TVEC.

Kelsey, a recent graduate of Rossville Christian Academy was a 2019 delegate of the Washington Youth Group tour, an annual leadership and education event sponsored by the state electric cooperative. In the year following the tour, delegates who remain engaged with their sponsoring cooperatives and complete certain community service requirements are eligible for the scholarship. Bizzell was selected from among the delegates from across the state who completed the requirements.

"When I found out I won the scholarship, I was shocked and excited," said Bizzell. "Out of 186 people, my name was chosen. Writing the paper was fun. I didn't think I would win and getting the opportunity to go on the trip was fantastic. I learned so much on the trip and the scholarship is just the cherry on top of the entire experience."

Kelsey is the daughter of Jennifer Bizzell, granddaughter of Jane and the late Jimmy Johnson of Rossville, TN. Also the great granddaughter of Esther Godwin and Mary Jo Johnson of Savannah, TN. Kelsey was also the Salutatorian of her class at Rossville Christian Academy. She entered the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga last week. We are proud of her and wish her well.

The youth tour and cooperative youth ambassador program are great opportunities to help students learn about public policy, cooperatives and leadership," says Andrea Kee, communication specialist for Chickasaw Electric Cooperative, Bizzell's sponsoring coop. "We are excited to see the impact Kelsey will have on our community."

Several children have left this week for the colleges of their choice. I wish them all well.

Have a blessed week and pray for the days ahead.
